I am to state that the valuation of answer scripts is a part of academic work as per the UGC norms and the conditions of affiliation under Statue 44 of Chapter XVI of the University Calendar, failing which the matter will be viewed very seriously by the University and the same will be brought to the notice of the Director of Collegiate Education for further suitable action.

The Vice Chancellor desires to draw the attention of all the examiners that complaints regarding valuation from the students and requests for retolling/revaluation were slightly on the higher side during the last examinations. The examiners are therefore requested to be extremely careful and help us to establish a zero complaint evaluation.

A Transparency system has been introduced from 2003. The photocopies of valued answer scripts are to be provided to the candidates. Therefore, the examiners are requested to be extremely careful while valuing the answer scripts.

Abstract: Now a days Cloud computing plays a vital role in the IT enterprise. Statistical Process Control cloud charts sense routine variances and their root causes are identified based on the differential profiling strategy. Most of the manual overhead incurred in detecting the software variances and the analysis time are reduced to a larger extent but detailed analysis of profiling data are not performed in most of the cases. At the same time, Trusted Computing Base (TCB) of a computing node does not achieve the scalability measure. This work, a Practical Bayes approach studies the problem of detecting software variances and ensures scalability by comparing information at the current time to historical data. GenProg uses an extensive structure of genetic programming to develop a program variant that retains essential functionality but it is not vulnerable to a known deficiency in cloud. The existing software testing suite identifies program defects in cloud environment. Delta debugging and Structural differencing algorithms minimize the dissimilarity among variant and the original program in terms of minimum repair. Subsequently, Defect Localization based on Band (DLB) mechanism is introduced to overcome the defects and rank the different acceptable patches.

LINTRODUCTION

Cloud Computing is being altered and distorted to a new model consisting of services that are commoditized and delivered in a fashion analogous to conventional utilities. In such a model, customers access services based on their necessities without knowing from where the services are hosted or how they are distributed. Cloud computing denotes the infrastructure as a Cloud from which commerce and clients are experienced and proficient to access applications from anywhere in the world using on demand techniques. The Cloud based Computing Service Model is based on three primary factors such as Infrastructure as a Service (IaaS), Platform as a Service (PaaS) and Software as a Service (SaaS). All IT functions with applications, networking, security, storage space and software are developed for users to work in a service, based on the client server model.

INTRODUCTION

In recent years, due to the rapid development of information technology, the establishment of our online platform has become more and more perfect, and the Internet has become the core of knowledge acquisition. How to make use of the Internet learning platform to further improve the teaching process is the urgent problem to be solved. Through the data mining technology, the establishment of education-related model can provide effective supports for platform decision-making.

The research shows the successful application of data mining in the commercial, financial and market fields, which is an inspiration for educators with all kinds of data in a rapidly growing field of education [1]. The attention on educational data mining at home and abroad is increasing year by year, and the research shows a rapid growth trend. The development of online courses is a small peak for online education [2]. As the Internet resources are easy to be accessed and so on, more and more learners who are hard to access formal English studies have chosen the online platform learning channel. A large amount of behaviour data accumulated on the platform obtains potential rules through data mining to provide supports for school teaching decisions [3]. However, there are problems with database information, and it can't make full use of data mining, which still needs further consideration. With the arrival of the micro era, learning resources will soon complete the online transformation [4]. English teaching practice is based on the characteristics of big data technology, and is adjusted through the selection, acquisition and evaluation of teaching resources, so as to improve the quality of teaching [5].

Based on important essential speculations, in the paper, the related information was dissected and the impact of information mining in English web-based learning stage was talked about as well. In the subsequent segment, the information mining innovation was considered, and the improvement procedure of information mining was additionally talked about. In the third area, the information mining innovation stream and examination calculation were dissected. In the fourth segment, models were given for the grouping examination in information mining and the utilization of affiliation runs in English internet learning stage. At last, in the fifth segment, the examination procedure and result were condensed. With the advancement of Internet innovation and the forward leap of conventional homeroom learning, separation learning dependent on Web has been promoted quickly [6]. It is a well-known fact that WhatsApp messenger has replaced the use of personal computers whereas the arrival of smart phones has changed the behaviour of a student and his academic performance. Social networks have placed a permanent place in the young minds, which can be easily measured by their desperate involvement in social media that lead them to get connected with friends, relations and academicians.[7] Through mobile learning, the Lear2GO project of California University and the European University allows teachers and students to communicate effectively in the classroom, and it can also be extended to extra- curricular learning, so as to make it more convenient for students to learn[8]. Nonetheless, because of the undeniable character contrasts among students, the current remote instruction framework model is single, and students can just acknowledge a similar substance latently, which can't be picked and conveyed by their own needs [9]. This has prompted the absurd utilization of an abundance of instructive assets. Taking into account how to take care of this issue completely, the standard and structure of separation learning model PDLM is advanced. With the improvement of innovation and the fame of Internet, there is a requirement for a more amicable system stage that addresses the issues of clients. Tina has actualized an English learning framework dependent on Web Services arrange. The client experience is all the more inviting, and it can completely epitomize the understudies' dynamic interest, yet thinking about the memory consumptions, the framework doesn't include more activity impacts [10]. So as to fulfill the data advancement of instruction, the interface of English online stage training framework ought to be improved, and numerous scientists in India start with the specialized level, and the client need, by and large plan, framework execution and different parts of the online instruction stage have been improved too [11]. By extending the extent of educating, revamping the inquiry type, improving the online framework input and different angles, clients can encounter the adaptability of learning.

Factors Influencing Women Entrepreneurial Decision-Making Styles In Msmes

Dr.S.Yuvaraj, M.Sujatha

ABSTRACT.The women entrepreneurial action in the decision-making process gives different decision-making styles which improve the value of their enterprise. This decision-making styles creates the women as a potential entrepreneurial leader. The purpose of the present study was to analyze the factors of entrepreneurial decision making approach which influencing the women entrepreneurs towards their entrepreneurial decision making styles in Tiruvallur District of Tamil Nadu. To achieve the purpose of the study, 637 women entrepreneurs were identified as sample from the district. The lists of sample respondent were collected from the District Industries Center (DIC) and Women Development Corporation by adopting the convenient sampling method. The result of the factor analysis shows that entrepreneurial decision making approach was divided under the different quantitative variables namely conceptual style, directive style, analytical style or behavioral style. These are influencing the women entrepreneurs to have control over the situation by maintaining good employer employee relationship to achieve successes of the enterprise.

Keywords: Women Entrepreneurs, Decision-making styles, Potential entrepreneurial leader, Entrepreneurial action, Conceptual style, Directive style, Analytical style or Behavioral style.

1. Introduction

The decision-making approach of the women entrepreneur is a human performance with regards to the decision, which is subject to the active research from several perspectives, it make her to think and reason, before they act as an entrepreneur. When the women decided to become an entrepreneur, her decision and action to be interpreted in terms of several basic approaches, these approaches may be changed and developed by a woman, being a self-employed and to be a good business leader in their field. The inborn and learned skills of the women in business promote individual ability to lead their business effectively as a good decision maker. The dimension of decision-making is based on the individual way of thinking the information logically or creatively, this may differ on the basis of the situation. The business behavioral decision-making approach focuses on the styles that women entrepreneurs using in choosing among alternatives. There styles reflect a number of psychological dimensions including, how they perceive the business information available in the environment by maintaining the structure and control over their enterprise to handle the uncertain situation. The task and employee oriented business decision are categorized into taking value oriented decisions, which tolerate uncertain situation exist in the business environment. The conceptual, directive, analytical and behavioral styles of the women entrepreneurs are concern about their entrepreneurial task and employee – oriented decisions which reflect in their decision making styles.

2. Review of Literature

The women entrepreneurs in Asian developing countries are lagging in entrepreneurial education and skill, due to their marital status and heavy household responsibility imposed on them. The socio cultural practices reduce their involvement in the entrepreneurship. The inadequate legal, traditional and cultural support from the society and family members reduce the women entrepreneurial decision making power, it has showing decreasing trend in the selection of entrepreneurship profession when compare to employment opportunity. (Tambunan, T. 2009) The women entrepreneurship role and their styles are different from male in administrative decisions. The gender-stereotypic role influence the women leader's social behavior and deliver the different approach in leading employee and make task –oriented decisions on the basis of situation. The women entrepreneurs are role models for those following participatory decision-making style with their employees and have their focus towards the task orientation Eagly, A. H., & Johannesen-Schmidt, M. C. (2001). They are playing different role as an owner, employee and member of the family business to have a people – oriented approach. The effective quality control management decision to bring change in traditional ideas of stakeholders and to frame the new police to grasp the business opportunity for their family business Frishkoff, P. A., & Brown, B. M. (1993). The women decision making approach in the family business reflect their business talents and to create the good interpersonal relationship with their employees and customers to get the business recognition. The stereotyping role and gender discrimination are not recognizing the women business decision. Salganicoff, M. (1990). The managerial styles of the manager from different countries in making decision are based on the logic or on their emotion. The personality of the women entrepreneur decides their approach to take action against the problem by considering the long term view of the business existence. They make managerial decision in a logical and objective way and they are extroverted and sociable in their interpersonal communication and maintain structured environment. They use to have their control over the situation to achieve entrepreneurial successes. Montequin, V. R. et al (2015).

3. Objectives of the Study

This research paper aims to find out the factors which influence the women entrepreneurial decision-making approach towards their entrepreneurial decision-making styles.

4. Research Methodology

The primary data has been collected from the women entrepreneurs who are involved in the entrepreneurial activity. The well-structured Questionnaires were framed to

Abstract – Underwater communication is a newer addition to the ad hoc network arena as it opens several avenues of research that can be carried out under water. It has a varied range of applications which it carries out with the help of Autonomous Underwater Vehicles (AUV). Acoustic waves are used for sending out the network signals because they tend to have a lower attenuation under water. Underwater Acoustic Communication (UWAC) is used to send and receive signals underwater. Since UWAC is a relatively new field, there are still a lot of challenges to overcome. Unlike terrestrial communication, UWAC has to encounter factors like limited bandwidth, longer propagation delay, Doppler Effect, and channel availability problems. All of these factors have a direct effect on the throughput. Clustering the network can effectively help in managing the network efficiently. We have proposed an Energy Efficient Minimum Cost Cluster routing Protocol (EEMCCP), which routes packets with the help of clusters. The clustering of the network is efficiently achieved by using the Chaotic Algae Algorithm (CAA). After clustering the network, one node from each cluster acts as the Cluster Head (CH). The proposed protocol does not require any node position information and also ensures that, only a minimal number of nodes are involved in the end to end routing process. Some of the Cluster Heads are selected as gateway nodes based on their RSSI (Received Signal Strength Indicator) values of the Hello packets. Selected CHs are appointed as gateway nodes that are responsible for supplying the data to the AUV nodes that are nearer to them. When these gateway CH nodes exhaust their energy, back up nodes act as gateway nodes thus making the protocol a flexible one. In fact, the node location and position are not taken into consideration. The AUV nodes transfer the acquired information to a communication link which in turn transfers the data to a terrestrial destination. The EEMCCP focuses towards a cost effective solution for transmitting data. The performance of EEMCCP is compared with the existing protocols employed for underwater communication. From the analysis, we find that EEMCCP achieves a good throughput and PDR than the existing protocols.

1. INTRODUCTION

Underwater network communication is an advanced network where the nodes move and collect data underwater [1]. The collected data is distributed to the communication points using AUVs [2]. The sensor nodes have provisions to enable communication. In other words, the underwater nodes need to have self-set up capacities. Underwater communication has a lot of varied applications in both military and civil fields. It also helps in studying the ocean bed and the effect of environmental changes over it [3]. Underwater communication helps in collecting scientific data and supports monitoring activities based on it. The UWSNs need to exchange information regarding the configuration, location and movement of the nodes. After analyzing the data, the UWSNs transfer the data to inland points where the data is used. The nodes use radio waves to communicate their findings. Interfaces in underwater communication depend on
